

A PEASANT.

If He Had Kept His Tongue to Himself

Russia and Austria Would at This Very Moment Be at War.

Austrian Soldiers Cross the Boundary Line and the Cossacks Prepare for Battle—An Austrian Commander Discovers Where He Is and Makes a Retreat.

VIENNA, May 31.—The spectacle of Russian troops marching in hostile array against the Austrian forces was witnessed Sunday at the Galician frontier, near Radzivilov. The Austrian garrison of Brody, an important town of Galicia, about 38 miles from the Austrian military headquarters at Lemberg, for Eastern Galicia, was out manœuvring.

Brody is only a few miles from the Russian Polish frontier and in the course of tramping about the Austrian troops unwittingly crossed the frontier into Russian territory a short distance from Radzivilov. The whole frontier is patrolled by Cossack videttes, and it did not take long for the Russian sentinels to spy the Austrian banner borne on Russian soil.

The Cossacks hastened to report to the commander of the garrison at Radzivilov, and the troops were at once ordered to turn out prepared for battle. The Russian commander marshaled his men and then started out on a hasty march in the direction where the Austrians had been seen. His avowed object, as stated to his troops, was to attack the invaders and drive them back over the frontier.

Had he overtaken the Austrians a serious and sanguinary encounter would probably have been the result. Fortunately, for peace, the Austrian commander had his attention called by a Polish peasant friendly to Austria, as most Poles are, to the fact that he was on Russian territory.

A brief review of the surroundings satisfied the Austrians that they had made a mistake, and they turned their faces at once toward the frontier. Just as they were crossing the Russian troops were seen approaching in the distance at a double quick, but before the Russians got into firing range the Austrians were on their own side of the line, and there was no longer excuse for hostilities on the part of the Russians.

The Russians acted as if they were disappointed, and their commander, after placing a strong outpost at the point where the Austrians had crossed, returned slowly to Radzivilov. The incident was at once reported to the Prince von Windisch-Groetz at Lemberg, general-in-command of the Austrian forces in Eastern Galicia. The affair is regarded in Vienna as of considerable significance, as showing the readiness of the Russians to seize any pretext for hostilities.

BURIED ALIVE.

Evidence That Private Devine Met a Horrible Death in His Grave.

PHOENIX, A. T., May 31.—A ghastly sight met the eyes of parties engaged in removing the remains of a soldier from Ft. Lowell to the National cemetery. The evidences were plain that James Devine, a member of E Troop, Fourth cavalry, who died there four years ago, was buried alive. The head of the body was turned over to the left, and the right arm lying straight down by the side. The left arm was thrown over the left thigh and the lower limbs were crossing each other. From the appearance and position of the lower jaw and portions of the face, which were yet intact, it is clear that animation returned after burial, and that he subsequently died in great agony. Devine's supposed death was caused by a kick from a mule.

AN EXTRAORDINARY SERMON.

Rev. Dr. Rainsford Gives His Congregation Another Shock by His Plain Talk.

NEW YORK, May 31.—Rev. Dr. Rainsford preached Sunday on the methods to be used for the suppression of vice in New York city. He began by saying there were two ways of overcoming vice—one by aggression and one by education. Both must work together. He said: "Vice must never be licensed, for licensing it is encouraging it. There have been too many 'splurges' of righteousness which soon exhausted themselves and left the situation unchanged."

Dr. Rainsford then reasserted that "the saloon had come to stay," and this was followed by the startling observation: "It is no sin to drink. It is no sin to keep a saloon. It is vain," he continued, "to cry out against a thing which a vast proportion of mankind believes is not wrong." There seems no other plan than open saloons of the sort he described last Sunday. The poor man is as much entitled to his club as the rich man, and room is needed in which the poor, who now swarm on the crowded streets and in the low saloons of New York, can enjoy such social pleasures as are within the reach of the rich."

Dr. Rainsford thought there is little use in enforcing a law against what the majority of men think right. "You can't make an Irishman believe it is wrong to take beer with his dinner. You can't make an Englishman believe it is wrong to take beer with his dinner, and it may be that is why I believe it is not wrong to take beer with my dinner."

Dr. Rainsford is an Englishman. He said that we have no right to make a law that forbids keeping open the saloons a portion of the day and tempts a man to force his child to break the law by sending that child for beer when the doors are closed.

Twice during the sermon a very audible smile, a laugh, in fact, passed over the congregation, and those who were not amused were evidently shocked. Plainly, Dr. Rainsford has not the general sympathy of the parish in the stand he has taken. There were numerous comments heard as the vast assemblage broke up; but there was no indorsement of the views just expressed.

EMIN PASHA'S JOURNEY.

The Latest Movement of the Great African Explorer Described.

NEW YORK, May 31.—A special cable from Berlin to the World, says: A letter from Dr. Stuhlmann, the companion of Emin Pasha, received by Prof. Supan, of Gotha, brings information of the journey undertaken by Emin Pasha and himself to explore the country along the German and English boundaries. The journey began March 22, 1891, and lay through the unexplored ground south of Stanley's track.

In the course of the journey Emin Pasha succeeded in establishing communication with some of his former people. One hundred and eighty-two Sudanese joined him, and the expedition marched north. It was obviously never a part of Emin Pasha's plan to return to Wadai. He desired to traverse the principal forests towards the west, but want of provisions, carriers and the general distress in the districts which had been laid waste by the slave drivers compelled him to abandon his plan.

The return journey was over much the same route. On the way sickness and hunger and the attacks of hostile tribes caused great suffering. Emin Pasha himself fell ill, and almost lost his eyesight.

An outbreak of small-pox necessitated dividing the caravan into two parts, and Dr. Stuhlmann moved off at first with the healthy men. He waited some time at Kinjawa for Emin Pasha, but as no news reached him he, in pursuance of orders, resumed his march after January 13, reaching Bukoba, on Lake Victoria, February 13. The latter states that the territory of Mfumbiro, which Stanley claims to have secured for England, is in all probability beyond the thirtieth meridian, and therefore belongs to the Congo state.

ARKANSAS CITY'S BATH.

The Water From Five to Ten Feet Deep in the Streets, and Continues to Rise.

ARKANSAS CITY, Ark., May 31.—The gauge here registers 49.7. The back water is now only about ten inches lower than the water in the river. The water in the streets ranges from five to ten feet deep. The water is sweeping over the track of the Missouri Pacific railway in many places between here and Tripple, and is cutting the embankment in many places badly. The track has been fastened to the trees in many places with heavy wires and ropes, but much of it is likely to be carried off in spite of all efforts. Citizens do not hope for a fall in the river here for the next two weeks and the chances are that it will continue to rise slowly for several days, and probably reach a stage of fifty feet.

ON THE SANTA FE

Express Train Thrown Into the Des Plaines River.

The Engineer Killed and Nine Passengers Seriously

And Five Slightly Injured—The Train Was Running at a High Rate of Speed to Make Up Lost Time—The Engine Struck a Cow and Calf.

CHICAGO, May 31.—The wreck of the Red Express, from St. Louis to Chicago, on the Santa Fe road, which occurred a mile and a half south of Lemont, a small quarry town, about twenty miles from Chicago, resulted in the killing of the engineer, W. A. Isabelle, the serious injury of nine persons, and the slight injury of five more. The names of the injured are: I. I. Allen of Chicago, injured in one leg. Mrs. Maria A. Bissell, Chicago, back injured. J. F. Egmann, of Chicago, slightly injured.

Chas. Fanning, Chicago, scalp wound. Mrs. Belle Friery, Chicago, injuries to spine and head.

Mrs. Hulda Fricke, Chicago, spinal injuries. Maggie Kilpatrick, Chicago, hurt about hips and leg.

Mrs. R. M. Quigley, St. Louis, Mo., spinal injuries. Charles M. Welch, knee injured.

Chris Slosson, Streator, Ill., fireman, leg and arm crushed.

It is not thought that any of the injured will die. They were all brought to Chicago, and thence forwarded to their homes.

It is stated by the passengers that at the time of the accident the train was running at a high rate of speed to make up lost time. At the point before mentioned, the engine struck a cow and calf which were on the track. The engine and tank jumped the track, and after running a short distance on the ties, rolled down the embankment into the Des Plaines river. The baggage car was landed on its side, the smoker followed, breaking the coupling with the engine. The latter tumbled with fearful rapidity down into the river with the engine and tender. Fortunately the depth of water was not sufficient to completely submerge it, and with such assistance as the trainmen could secure, the passengers were taken out through the windows.

KNOTTY

Case For Courts to Try—The Shooting Done in One State and the Killing in Another.

RICHMOND, Va., May 31.—News was received Monday of a murder in Mitchell county, North Carolina. James Byrd shot Isaac Nelson. The latter had for some time been intimate with Byrd's wife. Byrd lay in ambush near his house, seeing Nelson's horse hitched near by. Nelson and Mrs. Byrd soon came out. As Nelson kissed the woman and was turning to mount his horse, Byrd fired, and two bullets entered Nelson's back just below the shoulder blade. The gun was loaded with thirteen rifle bullets, having been especially prepared by Byrd for this purpose. Mrs. Byrd had once hidden the gun, and poured water in the tube. Nelson fired twice at Byrd with his pistol, but the latter was not hit. The shooting took place on the boundary between North Carolina and Tennessee, and when the shot was fired Byrd was in the latter state while his victim was in North Carolina.

A DEATHLESS FAME.

Unveiling of a Soldier's Monument at Rochester, N. Y.—President Harrison and Party Present.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 31.—The great event of Decoration day was the unveiling of the soldiers' and sailors' monument. This was the event which the president had come from Washington to witness, and which had drawn such a distinguished crowd to Rochester from all parts of the state. The monument is a tall one of solid granite, nine feet high, resting on a granite base and carrying a life-sized statue of Lincoln. The whole monument is forty-three feet high. On each corner of the base is a statue representing some branch of the naval or military service. On four sides of the base are bronze pictures in bas relief representing war scenes. The monument was planned eleven years ago. Its total cost has been $26,000.

While the parade was forming the president was shaking hands with several thousand callers in the hotel parlors. At 2 o'clock the president, Secretary Noble, Gov. Flower and his staff and the other distinguished guests of the day were escorted across the street to the receiving stand. When the president appeared on the stand the crowd cheered and the president took off his hat and bowed.

Soon after 2 o'clock the signal for the parade to start was given—three guns fired by the First battalion naval reserves—and Chief Marshal James G. Graham rode out at the head of the column and lead the march down Main street.

The president stood with his hat in his hand during most of the review. The uniformed organizations saluted him in military style as they passed and those without uniform took off their hats. When the procession had passed, the president and Gov. Flower and the party took carriages and drove to Washington square, where the monument stands.

Gen. Reynolds called the assemblage to order soon after 3 o'clock and introduced Rev. L. T. Foster, who delivered an invocation. The bands which had taken part in the parade then united in playing "Star Spangled Banner."

Gen. Reynolds in his opening address reviewed the work of the monument committee. In conclusion, turning toward the monument and pointing to it, he said: "We have erected here this column to witness that by it our valiant dead may yet speak. Let the monument be unveiled."

At this signal the young ladies standing at the base of the monument pulled the cord that released the drapery of the statue and it floated to the ground, leaving the column revealed in all its beauty. Cheer after cheer went up from the vast assemblage and the bands struck up Riegher's American hymn.

When the tumult had subsided, Dr. David J. Hill, president of the University of Rochester, was presented to the audience. His was the pleasant task of delivering the oration of the day.

Samuel H. Love, of Rochester, was then introduced to read the poem of the day.

Gen. Reynolds then introduced President Harrison, who spoke at some length. Gov. Flower also spoke. Hon. G. P. Parsons then presented the monument to the care and keeping of the city.

Mayor Curran responded, accepting the monument for the city.
